In her new book, Forgotten Women: The Leaders, Zing Tsjeng uncovers the extraordinary stories of women who have been erased from history.

These women are not the typical subjects of history books. They are not the queens and empresses, the scientists and explorers, the artists and writers who are often celebrated. Instead, they are the women who worked behind the scenes, the women who fought for change, and the women who made a difference in the lives of others.

Tsjeng's book tells the stories of women like:

- Sojourner Truth, a former slave who became a leading abolitionist and women's rights activist

- Elizabeth Cady Stanton, a pioneering feminist who helped to organize the first women's rights convention
- Ida B. Wells-Barnett, a journalist and activist who fought against lynching and segregation
- Madam C.J. Walker, a self-made millionaire and philanthropist who was a pioneer in the hair care industry
- Rosalind Franklin, a scientist whose work was essential to the discovery of the structure of DNA

These are just a few of the many forgotten women whose stories Tsjeng tells in her book. These women are an inspiration to us all, and their stories remind us that history is not always written by the victors.

Forgotten Women: The Leaders is a must-read for anyone who is interested in women's history, hidden figures, or the fight for equality.
